Shareholders and Stakeholders around the World: The Role of Values, Culture, and Law in Directors' Decisions

Main claims

- "Weak" claim: directors' decisions channelled by their personal value priorities and the institutional environment (cultural heritage and applicable legal regime)
- "Strong" claim: Law does not matter (?)
- Adams & Licht: "While the results should not be read as saying that "law does not matter", they do suggest that values' and culture's influence is not dominated by legal injunctions." (p 19)
- "U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) proposed legislation that would require very large American corporations to consider the interests of all corporate stakeholders. The present results suggest, however, that corporate leaders probably cannot be told what to do with regard to shareholders and stakeholders, including by legal injunctions." (p 21)

Some qualifications of the "strong" claim

 Conceptually: why should legal origins, anti-self-dealing and creditor rights indices be significant?

- 1. Law as culture: legal origins and legal indices as "expressive social norms"
  - But law as reflection of societal preferences questionable/contested
  - Components of creditor rights/anti-self-dealing indices reflective of culture?
- 2. Threat of sanction: law delineates permissible and impermissible spheres of activity and sanctions noncompliance
  - Where choice is permitted, personal values and culture may have an effect; where it is prohibited, values and culture will be dominated by legal injunctions

Permissible vs impermissible activity

Dodge v Ford?

Excessive risk-taking: Goldman Sachs, Citigroup vs. German case law Directors' margin of appreciation

Appreciation awards: Mannesmann vs. Delaware case law

Permissible vs impermissible activity

Dodge v Ford?

Excessive risk-taking: Goldman Sachs, Citigroup vs. German case law Vignette 1 (price reduction): consumers

Vignette 3 (BCE Inc.): creditors

Vignette 4 (Shlensky v. Wrigley): community

Appreciation awards: Mannesmann vs. Delaware case law

Vignette 2 (Parke v. Daily News): workers

Some qualifications of the "strong" claim

- Expectation: the influence of personal values and culture will be dominated by law outside the directors' margin of appreciation
- Law as a means of not only reinforcing, but also engineering (see Warren) societal preferences
- Question is how to engineer societal preferences if that is the policy goal – s. 172 CA 2006? Stakeholder reporting?
